Alliant -- a comprehensive and flexible option for securing IT support

Transparency, efficiency and accountability – essential business imperatives for government agencies operating in today's challenging economic environment. Yet constrained resources, shifting priorities and burdensome contracting processes further threaten an agency's ability to maximize mission results.

The Alliant GWAC provides the flexibility agencies need to meet these demands and to efficiently and effectively support the government's daily operational requirements.

Why CGI?

To help agencies meet their goals for transparency, efficiency and accountability, CGI offers a full spectrum of managed services: technology management, application management, systems integration and consulting, and business process services. Founded in 1976, CGI has worked with more than 100 federal departments, agencies and independent commissions to help them achieve their missions.

As a prime contractor on the GSA Alliant contract, CGI provides services in all principal task areas through prime and subcontracting arrangements that provide depth and breadth of support for the full range of IT services an agency needs to reduce costs and deliver results.

CGI's Alliant Contract Terms:

The comprehensive scope of the Alliant GWAC includes any and all components of an integrated Information Technology (IT) solution. As the definition of IT changes over the life cycle of the Alliant Contract, the scope will be considered to coincide with the current definition at any given time – providing agencies with flexible options for the future including
